Sample Routines

The Great Escape

Once Robert is shackled, he instructs the audience-volunteer to time his escape. A look of shock and surprise crosses the volunteer's face when he realizes his watch is missing. That's right, the sneaky magician stole his watch while locked in the shackles! Robert effortlessly gets in and out of the shackles without the volunteer having a clue. The laughter rolls and rolls through the audience until the volunteer catches Robert in his shenanigans.

The Magic of Teamwork

Four volunteers from the audience are given nicknames, seated closely together, and hypnotized. All four chairs are removed. Amazingly, the volunteers do not fall to the floor. Each volunteer is supporting the person in front of him. It's the magic of teamwork! The audience laughs hysterically while the volunteers "problem-solve", trying to figure out how to get out of their predicament.

Fire and Chainsaw (available upon request)

The audience will be awestruck watching Robert flirt with death, danger, and destruction as he actually juggles three flaming torches and eats fire. Then, to temptwfate, Robert tosses around a running chainsaw like it was a harmless beach ball.

Magic with Bowling Balls

Robert makes three real bowling balls appear out of thin air right before your very eyes. If that's not enough, in a show of sheer strength, he juggles them effortlessly.

A Sharp Balance

Robert balances precariously on a board, tube, and two chairs while juggling an axe, a machete, and a sickle. The audience cheers for the death-defying juggler and the brave volunteer who has just pulled off a solo performance of the Village People's YMCA.

A Perfect Match

The CEOs of a merging company or a couple celebrating their anniversary are brought up on stage. Each person freely selects a card. To everyone's disappointment, they don't match. But wait! Robert has a large prediction card that has been hanging (camouflaged) in front of the audience during the whole show. The prediction matches perfectly. Angels sing, and the audience jumps to their feet in a standing ovation.

The Slice-O-Matic

Robert demonstrates his new "magical" kitchen appliance. It slices, dices, and chops fresh vegetables. It has one important safety feature. It will not chop hands (the hands of the volunteer that is). With the flick of the wrist and a snap of the fingers, the razor sharp blade passes right through the volunteer's hand and a carrot. The carrot is sliced in two while the volunteer's hand is safe and sound. The audience and volunteer take a big sigh of relief.

Mind-Reading

Robert asks the audience a series of questions. No matter what the answer is, he has a funny prediction that is always right on the money.

Strait Jacket

Robert is strapped into a regulation strait jacket. The laughs come a mile a minute while he bends, struggles, and contorts his body to escape.

Bizarre Tricks

For audiences with a stronger stomach, Robert hammers a 6-inch nail up his nose, gets his hand caught in a bear trap, and puts a skewer right through his tongue. The tricks aren't real, but the laughs certainly are.

Sound FX

Robert electronically changes the voices of his volunteers. He makes a kid sound like a monster, a woman sound like an opera singer, and a big burly man sound like a munchkin from the Wizard of Oz. The audience falls out of their seats laughing and wondering what's next.

Pick Pocketing

Everyone agrees that Robert is friendly and funny, but no one expects just how clever he really is. While he is "innocently" talking to the volunteers, he is secretly stealing their watches, wallets, keys, cell phones, and jewelry. Has he no shame? At the end of the act, the wiley pick pocket gives back all the loot to the utter shock and surprise of the volunteers. The audience howls with laughter at the hilarious reactions of the volunteers. And then, they quickly check their valuables. No one is safe...

And Many More!

Robert has many more tricks up his sleeve. All you have to do is ask to hear about them. Also, he can customize any of the above routines and he can write original material just for your event. Call now for a video.
